Rapaport Resigns From World Diamond Council

Urges retailers to stop selling blood diamonds

RAPAPORT... PRESS RELEASE, February 1, 2010 – Martin Rapaport, Chairman of the Rapaport Group, resigned from the World Diamond Council (WDC) today. In an article published this past Friday and in a letter to the WDC, Rapaport explained the reasons for his resignation.

Severe human rights violations, including murder, rape and enslavement, have taken place in the diamond fields of Marange, Zimbabwe. These Marange blood diamonds have been imported into the cutting centers with Kimberley Process (KP) certificates. They have then been polished and set into jewelry and sold to retailers with WDC System of Warranty statements. Marange blood diamonds are now in the diamond distribution system and are being sold to consumers. The WDC has not only failed to notify retailers of the situation, but on January 27, 2010, it issued a false statement touting “WDC’s System of Warranties: Assurance of the Legitimate Source of the Diamonds.”

In his letter to the WDC, Rapaport states: “The WDC is aiding and abetting human rights violations through the dissemination of misinformation and by withholding information that would limit the trading of blood diamonds. Continued trading of blood diamonds by the jewelry industry under the guise of WDC legitimization enables, empowers and provides financial support to individuals, companies and governments that perpetuate severe human rights abuses in the diamond sector....I am shocked that the WDC continues to cover up human rights abuses.”

Rapaport’s latest article, “Stop Buying and Selling Blood Diamonds,” labels the KP and WDC a sham and cautions the trade not to trust the KP or the WDC when it comes to blood diamonds. He urges the diamond trade to raise consciousness, stay informed, consider returning diamonds with a green hue and adopt an “ask before you buy” policy.
